

> GEORGIA ARCHIVES MONTH 2023

Sparkling Curiosity: Demystifying Digital Collections

The realm of digital collections and spaces can be overwhelming. From obsolete file-based media to new asset management and online exhibit platforms, there is a learning curve for all of us. In October, The 2023 Georgia Archives Month theme encourages learning new skills and seeking out advice from colleagues who have been on this path before. By showcasing projects at various stages, archivists can seek out collective insight to empower themselves and others in our community.

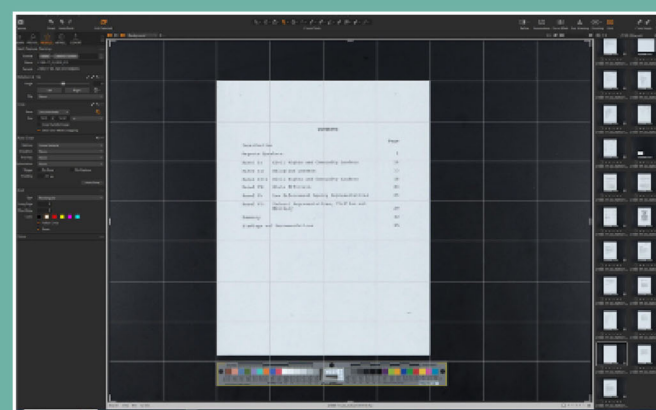

Digital Services department members Alex Dade Brinson and Cliff Landis photographing an oversized object. Citation: Photo courtesy of the Atlanta University Center Robert W. Woodruff Library.

From Atlanta History Center's Southline Press, Inc. photographs, eighth grade students Tony Daniel, Gerald Tyler, and Samuel Daniel, working on a computer at Walden Middle School in Atlanta, Georgia under the direction of math teacher, Dan Davis. Photo courtesy of the Kenan Research Center at Atlanta History Center.

Richard Parker marvels at the new Wang 3300 computer on the Westminster campus in 1975-1976. Photo courtesy of the Lewis H. Beck Archives, The Westminster Schools.

A digitized image readied for post-production by Georgia State University Library staff using Capture One photo editing software. The raw format image shown here will be used to create different types of derivative files for preservation and public access. Citation: Photo courtesy of the Digital Projects Unit, Digital Library Services, Georgia State University Library, Atlanta.

View of the UNIVAC 1108 Computing System with Mr. Spalding (right) and Mr. Calderale (center), student assistants in the Systems Effectiveness Office of the Computer Center, discussing operations with Mr. Tillirson (left), the UNIVAC 1108 Operator. Photo courtesy of the Georgia Tech Archives & Special Collections.

THE GAM COMMITTEE OF THE SOCIETY OF GEORGIA ARCHIVISTS WOULD LIKE TO THANK THE DIGITAL LIBRARY OF GEORGIA, HOLLINGER METAL EDGE, MEDIA PRESERVE, AND PRESERVE SOUTH FOR THEIR SUPPORT OF GEORGIA ARCHIVES MONTH.

